AN ASTONISHED REPORTER —At a fire in Portland, the reporter for a daily paper was placed in a somewhat dangerous, but at the same time extremely ludicrous position He is a valiant youth, perhaps he is one of those fellows who rush in where angels dare not tread He had gone into the stable and got a horse by the halter, and was urging him out Just at the door there was standing quite a deep tub, which happened to be empty When opposite to it the horse shied and set the young man gracefully into said receptacle He was completely doubled up, and there he was, wedged in so tight he could not move. The smoke was pouring down thick and frightened horses rushing around promiscuously. He kept hold of the halter, determined the horse should pull him out, but the horse seemed determined not to, for there he stood Finally the hat and boots were seen by a man, and thinking there might be something else in the tub he pulled out said boots, and then followed the rest of the reporter who immediately took a walk

The San Francisco Bulletin draws those reflections from the bursting of the diamond bubble

The developments in connection with the diamond fiasco show that there is no lack of money, or of readiness to pay it over, in San Francisco, whenever there is an apparent opportunity to double or quadruple it in some speculation quite out of the line of what is considered legitimate and prudent investment The taint of the early gambling vice is in the blood of the city, and manifests itself in periodical crises of speculation run wild It is a part of the overwhelming desire for sudden gain, the impatience of ordinary methods of thrift, which inspired and survive the mining "rushes" and excitements.

The Daily Oregonian.

FRIDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 6, 1872.

A Good Beginning and a Good Opportunity.

The session of Congress has opened in such a manner and under such auspices as would seem to promise well for the country. Not that all the measures proposed are such as should be carried through, but that there appears to be a disposition to go to work industriously for national objects. The excitements of the last political contest have pretty nearly subsided, and the scheming for the next has not fairly begun. This is the interval when it is possible for matters of national interest to gain a hearing, and Congress is evidently disposed to improve the golden moments.

A bill is introduced providing for the building of ten sloops of war, and another for the construction of a ship canal around the Niagara Falls on the American side. The proposition for the Government to acquire all the telegraph lines in the country and place them under the control of the Postal Department, is brought forward again thus early in the session.

These are all measures that concern the whole country. The feebleness of our navy in comparison with those of other great powers certainly demands attention. The President in his message well says that "to an energetic, progressive, business people like ours, penetrating and forming business relations with every part of the known world, a navy strong enough to command the respect of our flag abroad is necessary for the full protection of their rights."

The growing commerce of the country also demands an increase of facilities for transportation. The produce of the interior must have ampler means of reaching the seaboard. The great grain-producing and stock growing regions of the West and Northwest must be supplied with facilities for the cheap and speedy carrying of their commodities to the market or to the point of shipment. Whatever method may be suggested for providing these facilities, they must be provided in some way; and it is for the Government to find out that way and make it available. The President, though he does not express a definite opinion as to the best plan of increasing the means of transportation from the Mississippi valley, calls attention to the necessity therefor, and to the fact that the question is one that ought to receive the attention of Congress.

The settlement, for a time at least, and probably for all time, of the grave political questions that have been so long before the Nation, is likely to have a great and beneficial effect upon the commercial interests of the country. The thoughts of our statesmen will naturally turn to matters connected with the prosperity and happiness of the people, and the devising of measures for the promotion of national growth. That care which has been bestowed upon the question of national existence may hereafter be given to the encouragement of the arts of peace, the development of the national resources, and the cultivation of harmonious relations at home and abroad.

The Modoc Troubles.

The Indian troubles in the Link river country appear to be ended. They were not quelled, however, till the savages had massacred a considerable number of persons. A dispatch inserted in another column gives the names of eleven men who have been murdered, besides those killed in the battle.

The heroic conduct of Mrs. Brotherton in maintaining her position and firing upon the Indians from her cabin for two or three hours, and finally driving them away, is a parallel to that which in the war of 1855-6 made Mrs. Wagner famous throughout the land.

A letter from Jacksonville dated the 2d instant, says the bodies of the persons killed in the battle with the Modocs have been recovered from the battle-ground and buried at Linkville. Wm. Nuss rode into the midst of the Indians before he was aware of the disturbance, and was instantly shot from his horse. There was a rumor in circulation at the date of our correspondent's writing to the effect that the Pitt river Indians had joined the Modocs, and considerable excitement was occasioned thereby. From the later dispatches we are glad to be able to state that the report was probably without foundation.

No news had been received from Langell valley. There are several families and a large amount of stock in that valley, and the Indians have heretofore claimed that as their ground, and repeatedly warned the whites away.

The announcement is made that a vessel has just arrived at Havana with seven hundred coolies who had been sold previous to their arrival. The next item in the same dispatch is that a ship has arrived having on board ten blood-hounds for service in capturing runaway negroes in the mountains of Cuba. These announcements read wonderfully like the notices that used to be found in the Southern journals of the United States, and yet they grate very harshly on the American ear of to-day. That which was most likely to attract attention among the advertisements in the newspapers of the South a few years ago, was the picture of a negro man trudging along with a little bundle, supposed to be his wardrobe, slung over his shoulders, while the words "Run Away," in the most approved style of display, combined with the fugacious portrait to make up the caption of a card giving a specific description of the absconding slave and offering a large reward for his capture. Our sins look terribly dark when our neighbor commits them.

By direction of G. S. Ladd, Assistant Superintendent, the Western Union Telegraph Company sent the President's Message over the wires, and delivered it to the press of this city, free of charge. For this generous compliment, the Company, and also the operators here and at Sacramento who performed the labor of transmitting the voluminous document, are entitled to the thanks of the press and of the public.

The strikers in the London gas works have got the best of the public. The city is in darkness for want of men to manufacture gas. London in darkness is not a pleasant subject of contemplation. With its millions of souls, its hundreds of thousands of hungry paupers, and its immense population of criminals, one [illegible] idea of being [illegible]

The application of Barney Woods to the President for a commutation of the death penalty to imprisonment for life, he having been convicted of murder, was referred to Attorney-General Williams. In his report upon the case, which is adverse to the application, the Attorney-General says that for the protection of society it was necessary to show that the death penalty would follow certainly and quickly upon the commission of the crime, and that there was nothing in this case to justify the remission of the punishment awarded by the Court. On the contrary it was a murder without the slightest excuse or palliation.

The feeling generally in this community is that there should be no delay in the administration of justice, especially in cases of murder, and that the extreme penalty of the law should be visited upon all perpetrators of that crime.

Four or five weeks ago we published an account of the murder of Samuel Fuller, on San Juan Island. The murder was at first supposed to have been perpetrated by white persons, but afterward it was reported that the criminals were Stekin Indians, and some of these were arrested at Bellingham Bay upon suspicion of having been concerned in the murder. It afterwards turned out that there was no sufficient evidence against the Indians. The murder is still involved in mystery.

The President calls the attention of Congress to the decline of our merchant marine. With our large and constantly increasing commerce, the carrying trade of the world is enjoyed mainly by other nations. This, the President thinks, is wrong. American commerce upon the ocean should be carried on under the American flag.

Grant's official majority in California is 12,244.

Grant's majority—counting the lowest vote for Grant Elector over the highest Greeley Elector—4,060.

George Francis Train received one vote in Umatilla county. In the above table we have given the average O'Conor vote, as cast in the several counties, in some of which the vote was for one set of Electors, and in others for another set.

J. Q. Adams received one vote in Marion. L. F. Lane received 5 votes in Curry. Four votes were given direct for O'Conor—3 in Douglas and 1 in Clarke. Four votes were cast in blank—3 in Umatilla and one in Washington.

The Total Result.

All the counties in the Territory have made official returns for the Delegate to Congress, although in other respects some of them are lacking. The law requires Auditors to forward to the Territorial Secretary full returns of the votes cast, not only for Territorial but also for district and county officers, and members of the Legislature, and the votes cast in favor and against a proposition to call a convention to frame a State constitution. Only about two-thirds of the counties have complied with the law substantially, and the counties Clickitat, Lewis, Mason, Whitman, and Yakima, have not returned as yet the vote given on the convention question. As the law requires the votes on this question to be canvassed, the same as that for Delegate to Congress, the formal canvass will not take place until the 5th inst., that being the day required by law, unless complete returns are in sooner. We publish below the vote as it appears in in the official returns, which shows an aggregate of 7,801 votes cast and a majority of 709 for Judge McFadden. To this aggregate ought to be added something over two hundred votes cast at Kalama which were arbitrarily and unjustly thrown out by the canvassing board of Cowlitz county, and we show a voting population of over eight thousand in the Territory. A precinct in Whitman county was also thrown out and we may safely assume that the great incumbency of the weather on election day kept at least five hundred voters from the polls. All these facts considered, our figures make a very creditable exhibit of our growth in population.

The following are the official figures:

| County. | McFadden. | Garfield. | For Convention. | Against Convention. |
|---|---|---|---|---|

THE REV. MR. STOY.—The Oregon Churchman copies from the Spirit of Missions an account of a visit of Bishop Tuttle to the Rev. Mr. Stoy, formerly of this city and now located at a frontier mission in Montana, from which we clip the following:

"At Deer Lodge I was met by Mr. Stoy, and warmly invited to his home. His is a small log cabin by a babbling brook, and surrounded by a modest garden. I went and took supper with him. A delicious meal it was to the palate, and delightful for the company. The peas, potatoes and lettuce were fresh from the Parson's garden, and all things were cooked and served by the Parson himself. The juciest of steaks and two most royal cups of coffee were added, and placed on the pine table that was attached by hinges to the side of the cabin, and that could fall out of the way with its one cross-leg when unused. And did not we two enjoy the food and the chat cozily together?"

"Living alone, and being entirely his own housekeeper in this cabin home of the wilderness, Mr. Stoy directs the Church work in Deer Lodge."

"From Deer Lodge, Mr. Stoy went with me to Missoula and the Bitter Root Valley. At Missoula must be, I think, next point in Montana to begin Church work. In the morning before service, Mr. Pruet rode on horseback thirty miles, from seven o'clock until eleven, to join us in the responses. And after the service, at night, the cabin of our host being not ample, Mr. Stoy slept out on the ground near the hay stack, rolled in his blanket. Where can you point me to a better twain of Missionaries?"

The Walla Walla Union says: "The returns in Idaho show that Hailey (Democrat) has beaten Huston (Republican) by a majority of about 1,000, while it shows that on the remainder of the ticket in the different counties in that Territory than the Republicans have elected about as many officers as the Democrats. In Ada county, where Hailey got 250 majority, the Republicans elected most of their candidates for county officers. In Owyhee, where the Republicans got away with a large portion of the county officers, Hailey had a handsome majority. And so it goes throughout the Territory—Hailey running ahead of his ticket everywhere. One reason for this, that Mr. Hailey is really a very popular man; another reason is that the people of Idaho are, in many places in need of additional mail service, and as Mr. Hailey is an old stage man, and conversant with the wants of the people in this particular, it was thought that he could do no more in this direction, at least, than his competitor. For those reasons many Republicans voted for him. Still we believe the Territory is very nearly equally divided in political sentiment."

The Walla Walla Statesman says: "For several months parties have been engaged in getting out timber on the Yakima for the use of the railroad, and, as we are informed, have secured all that will be required to complete the road. The prospect now is, that with the coming spring no time will be lost in placing our beautiful valley in communication with the Columbia river. Certainly all signs point to an early completion of the road, and with another season the iron horse will take the place of the "cayuse" teams on which we now depend for the transportation of freights."

CITY.

DESPERATE ENCOUNTER WITH A PANTHER.—We are in receipt of the following particulars of a desperate encounter which took place a few days ago, between a hunter and a large panther A professional hunter named Repps was out hunting this week on Martin's Island down the Columbia The hunter was accompanied by a young hound only After hunting a short time, the hound started some animal a little distance away in the dense brush Repps supposed from the baying of the dog that the animal pursued was either a bear or panther He accordingly ran from the thick timber in which he was standing towards the edge of the water A clear space of several rods divided the brush and the river margin On reaching the bank Repps halted and placed himself in an attitude of defense In a few minutes, the hound emerged from the timber and came running toward its master Immediately following the dog, and in hot pursuit, a large and ferocious panther bounded in sight Repps raised his gun to his shoulder and fired The ball took effect in the jaws of the animal, but did not inflict any serious injury nor retard its advance towards the hunter On firing, Repps retreated into the water up to his arm pits The wounded and infuriated animal sprang after and "tackled" the hunter The dog came to the rescue of its master, and made it so warm for the panther that it abandoned Repps and turned on the hound. Repps waded out toward the bank, turned around and fired the second barrel of his gun at the panther The load was large buckshot and took effect in the panther's side The wound was very severe, but did not entirely disable the animal, which was getting the best of the dog. Seeing that the hound would soon be drowned, Repps resolved to rescue it if possible He had discharged both barrels of his gun, and cast aside his large bowie knife in the edge of the timber when he started to retreat to the water No time, however, was to be lost, and Repps sprang into the river to save his dog. By this time, the panther had lost much blood and was growing weak from exhaustion The hunter, who was a powerful man, seized hold of the panther's head, and after a fierce "tussel," broke its hold on the hound The panther now turned on Repps A long and desperate encounter ensued between the hunter, panther and the dog At last Repps succeeded in keeping the animal's nose under water until it was quite dead after which he drew the body to the shore and finished from his wounds and pure exhaustion The hunter was severely lacerated in the conflict, and has scarcely been able to leave his bed since The hound is also badly torn Had not the struggle taken place in the water, thus placing the panther at a disadvantage, there is no doubt but that the wounded animal would have killed both Repps and his dog A portion of the panther and its skin have been sent up to this city

TRAVELING IN DISGUISE.—The appearance of a somewhat singular looking person in the city on Wednesday evening, has attracted much attention and been the cause of no small amount of conjecture. The person in question possessed nothing in the general aspect which would strike one as being unnatural In all truth, the individual was a human being, and quite a handsome one, by the way The only thing connected with the mysterious personage calculated to attract the attention and elicit the surprise of any one, was the simple fact that the person was dressed in a very neat suit of black broad cloth, and at the same time had all those characteristics common to a woman So strikingly marked was the contradiction in the appearance that it could not escape public attention The person came on board the cars Wednesday afternoon at the first station this side of Salem, accompanied by a small boy about seven years of age This person was, of a small slight build—almost girlish—and possessed a willowy grace which would, at a glance, preclude the idea that the individual was of the masculine persuasion The features had the true stamp of femininity, and long curly ringlets fell over the shoulders The voice also lacked the strength and coarseness which marks the man, while the hands and feet were of a size which would make the most conceited dandy sigh with envy Every one on the train who saw this individual, was impressed with the common belief that it was neither more nor less than a woman traveling in the disguise of a man On arriving at the depot this man or woman, as the case may be, took a hack, drove off, and was seen no more until yesterday, when the same person and the identical small boy, came down on the wharf, and took the Fannie Troup for Kalama Who this person is, of what sex from whence, and whither bound, is an unravelled mystery The police authorities have failed to take cognizance of the fact, but it certainly is a matter of sufficient public interest to warrant the apprehension of this walking contradiction Who and what the person is, and the object of the disguise, should be ascertained If it is a woman, she would caution recreant husbands and absconding lovers to keep their eyes about them, for this person is surely following one or the other Who this "Veiled Mystery," this "embodiment of vengeance," for supposed or real domestic outrage, will pounce upon and gobble up, none, not even the wisest can tell

SAWMILL ACCIDENT.—A large "bull" wheel at the Portland sawmills, used in connection with the machinery to draw logs up from the river, was accidentally blown to fragments yesterday morning about 10 o'clock The chain cable was attached to a log containing about 3 000 feet of lumber, the connections made, the belt thrown on and the huge piece of timber was caused to emerge from the water and ascend the ways When the log reached the top of the incline, and was being drawn on the floor, suddenly the belt broke the chain slipped off the pulley There being nothing whatever to hold the log it started to descend The way declined with a sharp angle, and being wet and slippery, the timber went down with a fearful velocity The chain being still attached to the log, was carried back with it This caused the cable, wound up, to unwind with very great rapidity The "bull" wheel was made of cast iron, weighed nearly half a ton and some five or six feet in diameter, and was caused to revolve with such velocity, that it was blown into fragments by the centrifugal force A hole was torn through the roof of the mill by portions of the fragments, and were scattered in all directions It is said a piece of the iron, weighing about fifty pounds, was carried clear across the river and landed on the roof of the sawmill opposite Other fragments, of different sizes, were thrown about the city in various directions Nine men are constantly employed about the mill, and several were standing near the wheel when the accident occurred, but fortunately as it may seem, not one man was to the slightest extent, injured The risk was fearfully narrow and the result almost miraculous

RESCUED.—The skeletons of four Indians were exhumed yesterday by workmen who are excavating for the new ferry slip, just above the old brick distillery, on North Front street The dead had evidently been once an old Indian grave yard From the appearance of the bones, these noble red men of the forest were deposited under the sod many long years ago Traces of old blankets were discovered in immediate proximity to each of the skeletons, leading to the conclusion that each of these dusky warriors had been enshrouded in his blanket as were his fathers before, and buried Great quantities of many colored beads were discovered scattered through the soil, and a rather curiously carved spoon was also found along with one of the skeletons The rest has the influence of civilization and progress has not only driven the poor Indian across the continent but now the rude spade invades the sanctity of the grave, and disturbs the bones of the sleepers

NEW FERRY LANDING.—Excavation was commenced yesterday morning near the river bank, at a point just south of the old distillery The object is to dig down a road way, and construct a ferry at which the railroad ferry can hereafter be land. At present the landing can not be effected on the western side at the foot of F street without much difficulty. The new ferry landing can be reached without trouble, as it is situated directly opposite the pontoon on the east side The work is going on rapidly, and as soon as the new one is finished

ADVERTISEMENT.—By reference to our columns this morning it will be noticed that the sixth and last advertisement on the stock of the Good Templars' Hall Association has been levied As the property is expected to be completed and ready for occupancy within two or three weeks we are requested to state that it is necessary for all claims to be presented to the trustees immediately, in order to pay up promptly to enable the directors to make a final settlement with the contractors

COLLISION.—Wednesday evening a collision occurred between the steamer Vancouver and the ferry boat Fern Hyatte, resulting in very slight damages to the steamer As the Vancouver was backing out, her boiler having loosened from the bank the heavy wind carried her over against some of the vessels rigging The guards were scraped and a portion of the cabin roof torn off The damage will not reach $50

ASKS FOR INFORMATION.—Twenty four years ago a man named John Brush came to Oregon to take up his residence in the then unsettled regions of this State He assisted in building Cuttings Mills, in Clackamas county, but soon after left the country and returned to his old home. Yesterday one of the principal real estate agents of Portland received a letter from this same John Brush The letter stated that the writer had for years been engaged in mercantile pursuits in Clinton, Michigan but he had recently concluded to come to Oregon and proposed to bring hither a colony of settlers As so many years have elapsed he desires to know all about the progress which the State has made in the 'arts of peace' Oregon will be glad to welcome the return of this prodigal son to her bosom

FAILED.—We have received information that a young man residing in this city attempted twice to commit suicide within the last few days, first by poison and second by drowning The stomach pump came to his rescue in the first instance and the officious interference of a bystander in the next The attempt to commit the "rash act" it is said was attributable to the loss of a considerable sum of money The young man "bucked" at the "royal tiger," and got bitten Those who have loose change should beware of that imaginary striped quadruped

STILL PENDING.—It is stated that the Northern Pacific Railroad Co and the holders of the Delay or Loring claim are still negotiating for a transfer of that claim or the interests that may have been established thereto, to the Railroad Company The site is just north of Holladay's Addition to East Portland, and is wanted, we understand, by the Railroad Company for depots, wharfs and stations

MCCORMICK'S ALMANAC.—We acknowledge the receipt of a copy of this annual for the year 1873. Like those of former years this contains besides a calendar a large amount of valuable statistical information of interest to the people of the State of Oregon and the adjoining Territories Everybody on this northwest coast should have a copy

ANOTHER ACCESSION.—Another accession to the family presided over by the courteous host—William Vadkins—at the Penitentiary, was made yesterday from this county. Sheriff Caywood took to Salem Chinn Moe, who was sentenced on Wednesday, by Judge Upton, to one year's imprisonment for larceny.

PREPARING FOR WAR.—We learn that Colonel Dennison, Adjutant General, yesterday stored in the Armory of the Washington Guard one hundred and forty breech-loading muskets, and seven thousand rounds of fixed ammunition What special use is to be made of them we have not learned

GOOD PRIZE.—We are informed that Mr. C P Bacon, the well known livery stable man, disposed of a span of small black horses to a well known gentleman of this city a few days ago, for the neat little sum of $1,800 The horses are of fine blood, and are aged respectively five and six years.

UNDER BONDS.—In the Police Court yesterday, the case of the State vs Charles Reynard, accused of the larceny of a wagon, came up for examination The court held the defendant to answer before the grand jury in the sum of $500 In default of bonds Reynard was remanded to jail

OF AGE.—If journals were required to attain their majority—in point of years—before reaching the zenith of their influence and usefulness, the OREGONIAN has acquired that proud and proviable distinction The first number of this journal was issued 22 years ago this day

REUNION.—Among the interesting incidents of Thanksgiving Day, was a family reunion at the venerable Father Kelly's residence, near East Portland We learn that there were present twelve children and eighteen grand children, besides a number of friends

TELEGRAPH LINE.—The telegraph wire for use on the Oregon and California railroad, was completed to Roseburg on Wednesday, and yesterday communication to that point with the Portland office of the Company is made for the first time.

RECEIVING GRAIN.—The ship Channel Light received yesterday about 60 tons of wheat The grain will serve to stiffen the vessel up and enable the remaining portion of the ballast to be removed from the hold without danger to the vessel

SHEEP.—Three hundred head of sheep was taken over on the Fannie Troup yesterday to Kalama From this point these sheep will be forwarded to Tenino by rail and from there will be driven overland to Victoria.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEPHENS.—The steamer John L. Stephens arrived last evening from San Francisco with passengers and freight A pleasant voyage was experienced No vessels were seen off the bar

NEARLY FINISHED.—The cargo of the bark Newcroft is nearly completed. That vessel will soon go down the river and take on board a sufficient quantity of wheat to finish her cargo for Liverpool

ON TRIAL.—When the Circuit Court adjourned yesterday afternoon, in consequence of the severe illness of Judge Upton's child, the case of State vs China Charley, indicted for grand larceny, was on trial

FITTED UP.—The store room on First street formerly occupied by Messrs Bamford & Morse is being fitted up in first class style by the Flied ner Bros for tonsorial and bath room purposes

LARGE QUANTITIES.—Large quantities of freight are now being shipped by way of steamer and rail from this city to Tenino, the present northern terminus of the North Pacific Railroad

MUNITIONS FURNISHED.—Col A P Dennison, Adjutant General of Oregon, furnished the Washington Guard yesterday with 140 breech loading muskets, and 7,000 rounds of shot

DECISION IN THE U. S. DISTRICT COURT BY JUDGE DEADY.

United States District Court for the District of Oregon. Friday, November 29, 1872.

The Augusta sued as the Pathfinder.

Under Rule XII of the Admiralty as amended May, 1872, persons who furnish supplies, repairs or other necessaries to a ship, with the express or implied consent of the owner or master, have a lien thereon for the value thereof, by the general maritime law, which may be enforced in Admiralty, whether such ship be domestic or foreign, or whether such supplies etc., were furnished to such ship at her home port or otherwise.

A carpenter or other person who works upon a ship in building or repairing her, in the employ of a contractor with the owner or master, is so employed with the implied consent of such master or owner and has a lien thereon for the value of such work, unless he has notice in due time that he must look to such contractor for his pay, and that he shall not have such lien.

On September 7, 1872, D. McLeod and fourteen others brought suit against the brig Augusta and her owners, James Terwilliger and Walter Moffett, to recover certain sums of money alleged to be due the libellants respectively, which in the aggregate amount to $942 42, for work and labor as ship carpenters, done on said vessel in July, 1872, at the request of John Rutter; and that said work was done by libellants upon the credit of said vessel as well as upon that of the said owners.

On September 24, the respondents excepted to the libel, for various causes, and upon the argument thereof, on October 12, the libel was held to be insufficient, because it did not appear therefrom, but that said Rutter was an intruder upon said vessel and without authority to repair the same or employ libellants to work thereon.

Leave being granted, the libellants on October 14, filed an amended libel against the vessel alone, alleging as above, and also, that said libellants done said work and labor with the knowledge and approbation of said owners, and that said Rutter was duly authorized by said owners to make certain changes and repairs on said vessel and employ libellants thereon, and that said libellants relied upon "the lien on said vessel which would accrue to them for doing said work and upon the credit of the owners and not upon the credit of said Rutter."

On October 19, the owners answered the libel, admitting that the libellants done work and labor upon said vessel, but denying all knowledge of the time so occupied by them, or that libellants done said work with the knowledge and approval of respondents, or that said Rutter was the agent of respondents or authorized to employ libellants upon the credit of the vessel or that of the owners thereof; and alleging that on May 31, 1872, respondent Moffett made a contract with said Rutter to make certain alterations and repairs in and upon said vessel for a certain price, said Rutter thereby agreeing to furnish all the materials and labor necessary to comply with said contract; and that said Rutter afterwards performed said contract and was fully paid therefor before the commencement of this suit; and that if said libellants done work upon said vessel it was as the employes of said Rutter and not otherwise.

On November 6 the cause was heard and submitted.

It also appeared from the pleadings and evidence that said alterations and repairs were made upon the Augusta at her home port, where her owners reside—the port of Portland—and that she is engaged in trade between this port and the Sandwich islands; and that respondents did not employ libellants, but that the work was done by contract with said Rutter as alleged in the answer herein, for the sum of $1,350, and that libellants done the work aforesaid at the request of said Rutter and the value and quantity thereof is truly stated in the schedule to the libel herein; and that libellants did not demand said money of respondents until after Rutter left the country.

Have the libellants, under the circumstances, a lien upon the vessel for their work done upon her?

The judicial power of the United States extends "to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction." (Con. U.S. Art. 3, § 2.) Of course what are cases of "admiralty and maritime jurisdiction," must finally be determined by the Supreme Court. The question involves the construction and interpretation to be given to the Constitution of the United States. Neither Congress nor the States can increase or diminish the jurisdiction.

By sec ion 6 of the act of August 23, 1842, (5 Stat. 517) Congress, among other things, authorized the Supreme Court to prescribe and regulate the form and modes of proceedings in admiralty. In pursuance of this authority and in accordance with the undoubted jurisdiction exercised by the District Courts from the formation of the Government, and affirmed by the Supreme Court in The General Smith (4 Whea., 428; (1819), The Planter (7 Pet. 324) (1833), The Orleans (11 Pet., 175) (1839)—that where a local law attaches a lien to a maritime service, as for repairs furnished a vessel engaged in maritime commerce, a suit in admiralty lies to enforce it,—the Supreme Court in 1844, in revising the admiralty rules, prescribed in effect by rule XII., that where by the local law a lien is given to material men for supplies, repairs or other necessaries furnished a domestic ship, they may proceed in admiralty to enforce such lien, as in the case of a foreign ship. In 1859 the Supreme Court amended this rule, so as to confine the remedy of material men in cases of domestic ships to a suit in personem—thus in effect prohibiting the enforcement of a lien in such cases, if any existed. Professedly, the rule as amended in 1859, only regulated "the character of the process to be used" in such cases, and did not touch the right, for a right in rem without proceedings in rem to enforce it, is practically no right at all. For the same reason, the rule, in effect, changed the law and excluded such cases from the jurisdiction of the District Courts.

After 13 years of unfavorable experience under the amendment of 1859, and many unsatisfactory attempts to account for the reason or existence of it, the Supreme Court in May, 1872, amended the rule so as to make it read as follows:

"In all suits by material men for supplies or repairs, or other necessaries, the libellant may proceed against the ship and freight in rem, or against the master or owner alone in personem."

I think the effect of the rule in its present form is to do away with the distinction which provailed after the decision in the case of The General Smith (supra) between foreign and domestic ships and ships in home or other ports, and to make all ships, as such, liable for repairs, supplies or other necessaries, furnished at the express or implied request of the owner or master. Ben. Ad. (§273) says:

"The civil law and the general maritime law, and the particular maritime codes, without exception, extend this lien or privilege to all ships and vessels without any distinction between foreign and domestic ships. Indeed, it is not easy to see how any difference can exist in principle—if one is a ship or vessel, so is the other—and the same law, and the same reason which gives a lien in the one case, gives it in the other. It is for service, labor, materials and supplies, furnished to the ship, and in some sort made a part of her, for her benefit, and the lien attaches to her."

After stating the fact of the distinction made between foreign and domestic ships in the case of the General Smith (supra), the same author (Id.) goes on to say:

"It is, however, believed, that whenever the question shall come before the Supreme Court, and be fully considered by that court, after argument, the distinction between foreign and domestic vessels will be found to be no part of the law of Admiralty. The mere residence of the owner would seem to have even less relation to maritime subject matter, than the protexts of the time of Lord Coke."

In a learned note to The Harrison (2 Abb. U. S. R., 74,) Mr. Justice Hoffman concludes, p. 93:

It is thus evident that by the principles and analogies of the maritime law, and the "good custom of the sea," "les bonnes coutumes de la mer," as they are called in the Consolato, and on the grounds of equity and natural justice, the lien of the material-man who has constructed, repaired or supplied a vessel, ought to be recognized and enforced as a maritime lien by Courts of Admiralty. And this whether the work has been done in a part of the State in which the owner resides or elsewhere; and whether upon the employment of the master, or of the owner, or his agent—excepting in those cases where the lien has been clearly waived, or notice has been given to the workmen and other materialmen, in order that they may not be deceived."

In the adoption and promulgation of Rule XII. (1872), without noticing or providing for any distinction between foreign and domestic ship and home or other ports, as in the rules of 1844 and 1859, it must be presumed that the supreme Court considered this question, and concluded that the distinction was "no part of the law of the Admiralty."

In accordance with these premises, I conclude that the rule on the subject of liens in favor of material-men has finally rested where it always should, upon the general maritime law, as administered even in England before it was there restrained by the Courts of the common law, in the time of Charles II.

If, then, the libellants are material-men within the signification of that term as used in Rule XII., they have a lien and are entitled to maintain this suit to enforce it. Indeed, upon the argument, it was tacitly conceded by counsel for respondents, that the case was narrowed down to the inquiry, Are the libellants material-men or not? No reason has been given and none occurs to my mind, why the term, material-men, should be used in the rule in another or more limited sense than in the general maritime law, from which it is taken.

Benedict says:

"Those are called material-men who, at the time of the building of a vessel, or during her subsequent existence as a vessel, supply her at the express or implied request of the master or owner with necessary materials to build, fit, outfit, furnish or repair." (Ben. Ad. § 267)

Parson says:

"The persons employed to repair a ship, or, in general, to do any work about her, and those who furnish for her use supplies of things necessary to her equipment and safe navigation are known in the law of shipping as material-men." (Par. Ship. and Ad. 1 B., 141)

In the Neptune, (3 Hagg. Ad., 129, 142) Lord Stowell cites a report made by that learned Judge, Leolino Jenkins, to the King, in which he says:

"Those are commonly called material-men, whose trade it is to build, repair, or equip ships, or to furnish them with tackle and provision necessary in any kind."

But it is insisted that libellants did not work on this vessel at the request of respondents—that there is no privity of contract between them and the latter, and therefore the law allows them no lien, and they must look to the contractor, Rutter, who employed them, for their compensation.

As at present advised, I think the libellants could not make the respondents their debtor and acquire a lien upon the vessel therefor, without the consent of the latter, either expressed or implied, Ben. Ad. (§267) A person who puts work or materials into the ship of another, as a mere trespasser or intruder, does not thereby become a material-man, and entitled to a lien thereon for the value of such work or materials: and so this Court ruled upon the exception to the original libel herein.

But the consent of the owner may be implied from the circumstances of the case. For instance, when the respondent contracted with Rutter to repair the vessel, it was necessarily implied that he might employ libellants, and they might be so employed to work thereon. They are therefore not intruders on or strangers to this vessel, but persons employed to work thereon with the implied consent of the owners.

This conclusion is in accordance with general principles of law. The owner of any structure or premises impliedly consents, that a person with whom he contracts to do work thereon may use any lawful and convenient means to perform his contract; and the employment of the libellants in this case seems to be within this rule or general principle. And upon authority it appears clear, that according to the general maritime law, where an owner makes a contract with another to build, repair or supply a vessel, that those who work thereon at the request of the contractor, do so, with the implied consent of such owner, and are entitled to a lien thereon for the value of their labor, "unless the dealings of the parties show that an exclusive personal credit was given to the master or owners," or unless they have notice that they must rely upon the contractor for payment. (Ben. Ad. § 267: Par. Ship and Ad. 2 B., 322.)

Emerigon in his commentary on the Consolato del Mare, as cited by Mr. Justice Hoffman in his note to The Harrison (supra 92), observes:

"The carpenters, caulkers, and other workmen employed in building, together with the creditors for the timber, cordage and other articles furnished, ought to enjoy the privilege allowed to them, unless they have been warned in due time that if they do not secure the payment of their claims against the contractor, they shall have no lien on the ship."

In this case it is not claimed that the libellants had notice in any manner that they must look to the contractor for the payment of their wages and they are entitled to a lien therefor.

This being so, it is unnecessary to consider whether upon the evidence the libellants or any of them and respondents understood from the first, that the former would rely upon the vessel as security for their wages.

Rutter gave bonds with surety in the sum of $2,500 for the faithful performance of his contract. Duncan Ferguson, one of the libellants, swears, that before he was employed Moffet asked him if he was going to work on the vessel. Witness asked M—— about the pay. Moffet replied that vessel was good for it, that Rutter had a contract to do the work, and he, M——, had a bond for twice the amount of work. It does not appear directly from the evidence, but it is probable that Rutter about the completion of the contract absconded. Moffet states that the man did not demand their wages of him until after Rutter "left," and that he did not remember the conversation with Ferguson.

A decree will be given for the libellants for the amounts severally claimed by them.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

Financial.

THURSDAY EVENING, Dec. 5, 1872.

Gold in New York to-day, 112¾.

Portland Legal Tender rates, 88½c buying; 89½c selling.

Wheat in Liverpool—Average, 12s@12s 6d; Club, 12s 8d@13.

Our Eastern exchanges continue to regard the financial condition of the country as hopeful, and express much satisfaction at the manner in which business has generally sustained the shock caused by the Boston fire. But it is amusing to note the different reasons assigned by the various leading commercial journals for the successful issue of matters after this calamity. One of our New York exchanges congratulates the country on a panic having been "avoided in consequence of the Boston fire, by the intervention of Sunday, which gave business men an opportunity of measuring the calamity in its great proportions, and discovering that there were no sufficient reasons for a crash in the market." Another contends that there exists in this country one condition which makes a money panic the next thing to an impossibility. That is the suspension of specie payments. That there was and is nothing in our general system of finance to create any apprehension of a prevailing wreck of commerce. Legal tenders, the liquidating medium answering to gold in a normal state of our economy, are not wanted in England. Hence the conditions on which alarm of a financial panic could be created. There is much of plausibility in the position that our legal tender system, being beyond the reach of the grasp of foreign markets, is proof against any extension of financial panic in our country, in the ordinary acceptation of that term. The New York Mercantile Journal, which very strongly favors paper money, denounces the idea of "a belief in the righteousness of gold as a liquidator," either when applied to our domestic transactions or our financial relations with other nations. It says:

We cannot better illustrate the conduct of trade between nations than by assuming that each corporation a country store is former times—say thirty to fifty years ago—when the trade alone was barter, pure and simple. Then the farmers and manufacturers sold their commodities to the merchant at a price in dollars, with the understanding that in return they could have anything desired from the merchant's stock at the market price, and "the balance of trade" was the book account, upon which, ordinarily, to the great relief of the debtor, no interest was charged. As between nations, the largest exporter takes the balance in bonds or other interest-bearing obligations instead of leaving it in non-interest-bearing book account. But in regard to the payment of those obligations, it is true, as in former times, that they can only be met by the Creditor Nation, accepting, out of the store-house of the debtor such commodities as may be cheapest to be selected according to the needs, real or imaginary, of the former at prices agreed upon. Sometimes, though seldom, the art is selected by our creditors—to a small amount—in gold; at other times silver; but generally, and to very large amounts the demand is for cotton, wheat, pork, and other intrinsically valuable commodities.

British Money Market.

A late number of the London Economist says:

The bank return continues to show no substantial improvement, although the proportion of the reserve to the liabilities is again a little better. The reserve has decreased by the fractional amount of £10,000, and the bullion has decreased £135,000. The smaller decrease of the reserve compared with the bullion being accounted for by another diminution of the circulation, amounting to £125,000. The bank is apparently strengthened by the running off of the private securities to the extent of £302,000, but this gain has been at the expense of the open market, which has also suffered from transfers from "private" to public deposits, the total reduction of the private deposits being £629,000, while the public deposits have increased £341,000. None of the changes thus indicate any improvement in the position of the money market, to which it may be yet retracted from abroad. Nearly £400,000, which arrived the week has been taken for Germany, and small sums are being steadily taken from the bank. The internal drain also continues, the total diminution of bullion having been £135,000, and the record amount withdrawn for export £40,000, so that £95,000 have been taken for the country. Considerable sums, we believe, have also been sent to Scotland and Ireland, since the account was made up, a rather larger amount than what is usual being the season required for Scotland.

Woolen Factories.

Three establishments constituting one of the leading enterprises of our country seem to have been more extensively disturbed by the Boston conflagration than any other. Owing to the loss of raw material, manufacturers in New England will be forced to engage in a keen competition with Eastern and Western consumers, for the balance of the stock remaining on the market or still in the hands of the farmers and producers. A New York paper estimates that the quantity of wool still remaining to be brought forward is less than one-third, and a little over one-fourth of the entire clip of the present year. It can, therefore, hardly be doubted, that every farmer who may have a pound of wool to dispose of will only sell at an advance on previous prices, while any supplies that may be obtained from foreign sources will only be procured through keen competition with manufacturers who are just as needy as our own. It follows, therefore, that there must be a considerable advance in wool, and that a return to anything like previous prices is not to be looked for in advance of the incoming of the new crop. Dearer wool means an advance in every description of woolens, and this has already taken place to a very considerable degree, holders of woolens, like holders of wool, are discounting the results of the depletion of stocks, by making up the rates of almost every grade. The consequences to manufacturers remain to be seen. The capacity of the trade, already staggering from the high prices of the raw material, and suffering from the impossibility of establishing a scale of prices corresponding with or equivalent to the cost of production, will undoubtedly be tested to the very last degree. It is still too early to anticipate the results. But manufacturers will no doubt see the propriety, not to say necessity, of adopting a conservative course. They will be compelled to limit production to the actual requirements of the market, and the ability of consumers to pay a scale of prices commensurate with the inexorable requirements of the trade. All kinds of wool, both domestic and foreign, has felt the demand and advance.

Boot and Shoe Trade.

An Eastern exchange of the 23d ult. says: "There has been increased activity, consequent upon the destruction of the work at the Boston fire, but the improved demand is only for certain styles of goods to answer the immediate requirements of the jobbing and retail trade in Boston and the Eastern cities. The general trade continues mostly quiet, and the sales are usually confined to small assortities of goods required by early buyers, who are anxious to make good their assortments of seasonable stock. Prices are somewhat higher for fresh goods, and continue to rule very firm.

In the line of overshoes, the loss by the Boston fire is estimated at over $1,000,000—which, taken in connection with diminished production and reduced stocks, will undoubtedly have the effect to send up prices. All woolen-lined overshoes will be more or less scarce and proportionally high."

A Decline in Iron.

Our latest advices by mail from the East note a weakness in the iron market, and dealers were, doubtless, prepared for a decline, but the dispatches received from Pittsburg last night indicate a much greater reduction than was anticipated, being $10 per ton on iron and 50 cents per keg on nails. This is near 20 per cent., and will greatly lessen the cost of improvement, of which this metal forms so important a part.

Home Finances.

Our local money market is barren of any new features, though appearances indicate a more settled state than at our last review. The transactions in wheat have been more limited, and in consequence the demand from the interior for funds to purchase has fallen off and left a better supply on hand for the accommodation of other branches. Under the law upon the subject of interest as it exists in this State, it is a matter of much difficulty to always give a correct idea of the current rates which are paid for the use of money. We can easily see that a scarcity of money exists, and note its effect upon the trade of the country, but on what terms funds are loaned when loaned at all, is not an easy a task, as the lending is a private contract which can only be known to the parties making it. Our market is very close, and though no cases of extreme pressure are reported, the stringency is very perceptibly felt in many quarters. We can say, however, that a feeling of greater security exists than was manifest in financial circles a week ago, and our business are likely to come through the crisis without more serious disaster.

Groceries.

In our home market there has been a fairly active demand for staple and seasonable grocery goods and prices mostly rule steady at former quotations. In some lines of goods there has been a slack market as compared with former seasons, but buyers are replenishing stocks with needed articles. As the season advances and the holidays approach fancy groceries and holiday goods are improving. The indications are encouraging for a fair active call for seasonable and saleable articles both of foreign and domestic production. Our jobbing houses generally have a moderately full stock and express as much satisfaction at the prospect of trade as could be expected in the present stringent condition of the money market.

Dry Goods.

Our local trade for the past week has been very fair and prices have generally ruled quite steady. Such changes as have occurred are noted below. Holiday goods in this line have changed hands to a considerable amount and the prospects of the trade are not at all discouraging.

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT—During the past week rumors have been numerous in regard to this staple and the market has been in a somewhat unsettled condition. It is easily determined what Wheat is worth when sacked and placed in store at this city, but from reliable information we are led to believe that prices in the interior are not governed so much by anything else as by the circumstances under which transactions take place. Parcel here in the condition above noted, the quotations are $1 45 per cental. The price paid at different points up the valley varies with the locality at which the purchase is made. That occasionally a little more is paid, we are well aware, but the quotations given are according to the usual rates paid here by exporters. The demand is now very fair, and we notice some increase in receipts during the past two or three days. The Zealous is in full cargo and ready to sail. The Naswarth has nearly all her cargo on board, and will complete the balance by to-morrow. The Channel Light is receiving cargo. The Victoria Njanza will not commence receiving cargo under three weeks, if then. The Channel Light is under charter by Rodgers, Meyer & Co., and being loaded by Allen & Lewis. The Naswarth is being loaded by Corbett & Madsen, for Rodgers, Meyer & Co., who purchased of them 12,000 centals, more or less. The Victoria Njanza will be loaded by Hewett, Wilson & Co.

OATS—The receipts are now large, and the demand good, both for shipment and local consumption. The California market is active, and telegraphic quotation give the San Francisco quotations as ranging from $2 25@2 35 ₩ cental. Our quotation is $1 00@1 05.

FLOUR—During the past week the receipts have been large and a good demand has ruled steadily. A disposition was noted to advance rates in the San Francisco market, but beyond stiffening up the market a little, it had no visible effect here, and our market is quoted in jobbing lots as follows. Standard brands extra, $5 ₩ bbl; choice country brands, $4 25@4 75; and for outside and superfine, $3 75@4 ₩ bbl.

HAY—The receipts are very fair with a good demand and prices unchanged. The ruling figures are $15@22 per ton for best quality.

FEED—The demand is good with some falling off in receipts. We quote bran $16 per ton; chops and middlings, $26@32 50.

BARLEY—But little offering and quotations nominal. Considerable activity is manifested in the San Francisco market and an advance is noted. Our crop has probably been small.

DAIRY PRODUCTS—The supply of butter of common quality is fully equal to the demand, while choice fresh roll is scarce at 40@50c per pound.

POTATOES—First quality command $1 per 100 lbs.; inferior sorts bring 60@75c.

POULTRY—The supply is good and prices last given are well maintained.

CATTLE—Beef is quoted at 7@8½ ₩ lb.; fat Hogs, to dressed, 6½@7 ₩ lb.; Sheep, $3@4 ₩ head.

HIDES—Market quotable at 16@17c ₩ lb for dry, and 8@9c for salted with ⅓c off for inferior qualities. Receipts continue fair.

TALLOW—Market quotable at 7@8c ₩ lb for choice.
